Introduction

This confidential 360 degree feedback report provides you with a detailed analysis of the information received from the individuals who have completed the 360 questionnaire.

Relationship	Minimum	Completed
Self	1	1
Manager	1	1
Team	5	5

If the number of responses that were completed are less than the minimum number, then the validity of this report is reduced and we would recommend further feedback.

This report provides you with a summary of the scores from your line manager and those respondents who have responded to the online 360 degree feedback questionnaire. These scores are summarised for each of the following 10 competencies:

Coaching for Performance
People Management
Decision Making & Judgement
Analysis and Planning
Effective Communication

Decisive Team Leadership
Initiative & Taking Ownership
Builds Relationships
Impact and Influence
Business Focus

The analysis of the 50 statements linked to the above identifies the average rating for each competency (including and excluding self) and shows the range of scores that were given to you.

In addition, information is presented graphically and displays the top and bottom five statements to identify your strengths and areas for development.

You can also compare the degree of variation of the importance ranking of competencies with your colleagues.

Understanding your 360 Degree Feedback Report

Primary objectives of the report

Single sourced feedback is rarely comprehensive enough to be regarded as good quality. Where staff are regarded as empowered to do their own jobs and interact with others, managers are regarded as the 'coach' to help and guide staff to a higher performance, and so single-sourced feedback is often considered inadequate.

360 degree feedback is becoming increasingly popular in linking good quality feedback with improved performance and as an essential part of personal development. The purpose of 360 degree feedback is to take feedback one step further and to involve a variety of people in the process. It is important to remember that respondents have not all been trained to review performance and therefore you need to remain reasonably detached and identify trends and consistencies within the data.

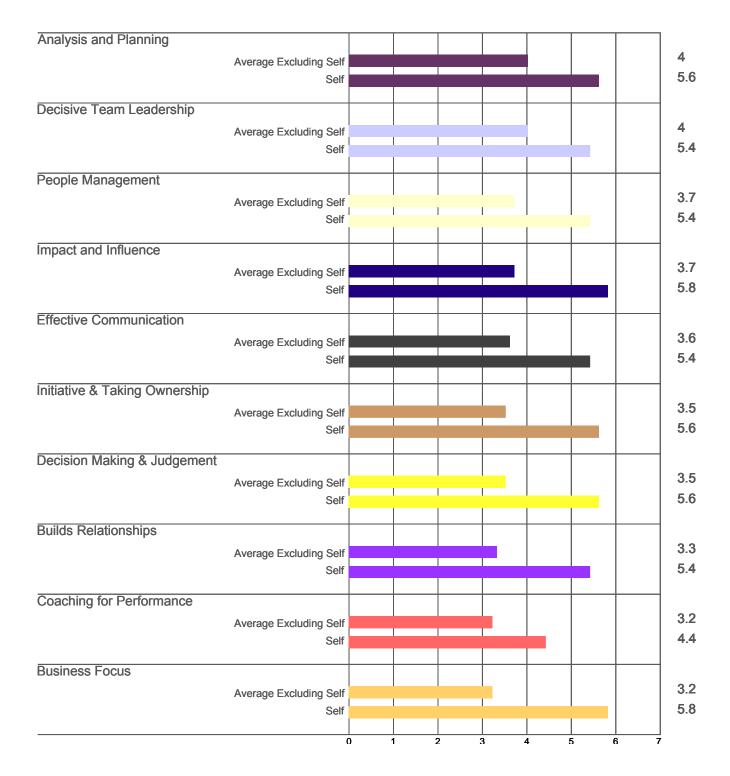

The purpose of 360 degree feedback

- To develop an awareness of your perceived behaviour within the workplace.
- To focus on changes that you may need to make in order to be more effective.
- To provide you with information that will allow you to build upon what you do well.
- · To allow you the opportunity to explore the reasons for the scoring.
- · To pave the way for you to take action.
- To give you the opportunity to take responsibility for your own development.

Averages for competencies

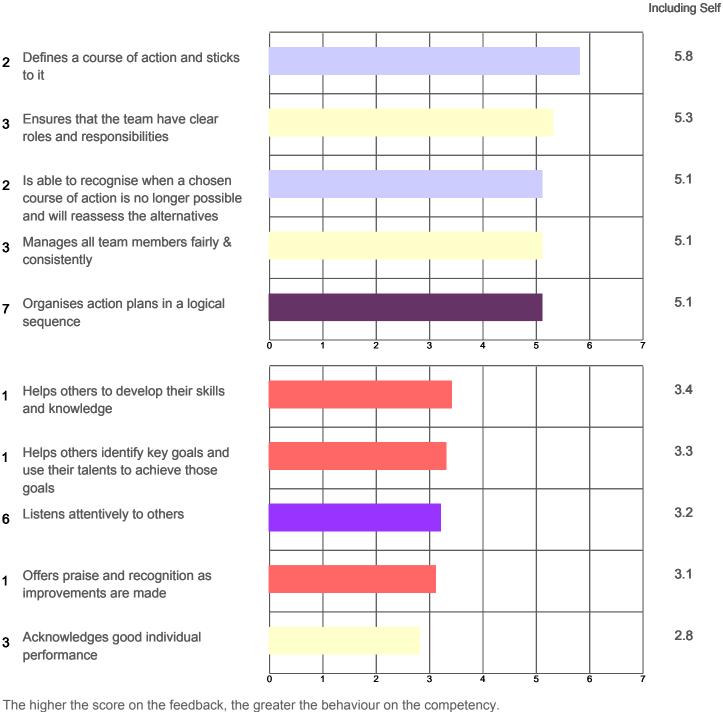

The table below summarises the scores of your 360 feedback against each of the competencies. The higher the score the greater the perception that you display the behaviour.

A graph of the top 5 and bottom 5 statement averages

The numbers on the left hand side of the statement relate to the competency colour code.

Summary of the level of importance of each competency for job role

The following table summarises how you rate the importance of the competency for your job role. You will also see how your perception compares with other people that have given you feedback.

It is worth obtaining further clarity where there are significant differences between the top scores that are highlighted in yellow.

Ranking and Rating Comparison

- Compare the Competency Rankings with your Competency Ratings. Your ratings are shown in the far right-hand column. The highest ranking competencies are at the top of the table.
- · High ranking competencies alongside high rating indicates your key behaviours are well matched with the priorities in your current job role.
- · Low ratings alongside high rankings may indicate potentially high priority development areas.

Ranking Differences

- · Cells highlighted in yellow indicate areas with greatest difference in priority ranking between self and other respondent groups.
- · Areas with large differences between ranking of competencies between yourself and other respondents often indicate a need to discuss the priorities of your role with those whom you work alongside.
- · Large differences often indicate potential areas of tension or misunderstanding.

Ratings against each of the 10 competencies

Explanation of the following tables

Each of the competencies has been broken down into statements, which you have received feedback on during the questionnaire.

In the example below each statement has a summary of the distribution of scores from yourself, your manager, peers and team.

Respondents have rated the statements based on their observations as follows:

- 7 Great Deal (High) the participant is exceptional and can be considered as a role-model in this area.
- 4 Meets Expectations the participant is meeting the expected standard for their role.
- 1 Not Much (Low) the participant needs considerable support or development in this area.

Not Observed/Not Applicable - the participant does not have the opportunity to demonstrate this skill, or, if it is not applicable to their role. In the tables that follow, this column is labelled "Not Observed".

Each statement is given an average rating and each competency has an overall rating score.

- 1. Where "Not Observed" has been highlighted it is excluded when calculating the average score.
- 2. The average rating for each group is displayed to one decimal place.
- 3. The statement average is the calculated true average rating of each group, i.e weighted average.
- 4. The competency average is calculated from the true statement averages (2). If a statement is not observed by anybody then it is not included in the competency average.

Qualitative Section - Questions

Comments compiled in this section are recorded exactly as entered by the respondents - they are not edited, emphasised, ordered or filtered in any way. Where comments appear to be duplicated it is where the same comment has been entered by more than one respondent.

What two strengths do you perceive this participant to display, and how have you observed them being demonstrated in the workplace?

- · I think I am respected for my knowledge Adaptability and commitment
- · Organised and thorough approach to the job John has a great skill in seeing what the problem is and coming up with a neat solution
- · He is a very organised person and won't be deflected from what he is focussed on Is highly principled and has high standards
- · High level of knowledge Confident, focussed on maintaining a high standard
- · John brings a wealth of experience and knowledge of IT issues John is very self-assured in his ability and knowledge and experience. This conveys confidence in his ability to solve problems
- · John is very good at assessing a situation Very analytical, balances risk well
- · John is good at probing to get to the bottom of the problem Very good at seeing the big picture

Qualitative Section - Questions

Comments compiled in this section are recorded exactly as entered by the respondents - they are not edited, emphasised, ordered or filtered in any way. Where comments appear to be duplicated it is where the same comment has been entered by more than one respondent.

What two areas do you believe the participant could develop to make them more effective within the organisation?

- · I need to prioritise tasks Nothing I can think of
- He should try to be more responsive to queries and offer solutions more quickly I don't feel he likes working with a team
- · Needs to be more flexible Works too hard and drives himself, he ought to learn to say "no" more often
- John needs to involve the team more in discussing how to address issues Needs to take other people's view into account
- · John tends to accept deadlines that are impossible to meet John sets very high standards and can be highly critical if others do not match up to them
- · Needs to communicate more, he thinks he has told everyone but frequently hasn't John is a bit of a loner, would be nice to see him come out of his office more
- · Tends to see his way is the best way Not a great communicator
